To understand the nitty details of what's new in Lightroom 5; let's have a look at what are the key features in Lightroom 5, how to turn these features on and off and what new features are added with this version of Lightroom—Lightroom 5. Photomerge is a feature that lets you merge multiple images into a single image, using actions to mosaics, panoramas, etc. To see what Photomerge is all about, go to the new Merge pane and click on Merge. From there, you will be able to slide the slider in far left to the right, or vice versa, to merge a group of images to one and get a custom operation. It's particularly useful for panoraman, jigsaw & mosaic. "This is one great new feature, and one that I've been wishing existed for a long time. The intention of panorama is to stitch several photos together, by using software's algorithms to recognize the edges & therefore, create a seamless image. The first thing I noticed after I opened a panoramic photo was how much detail there is within the photo. Along with this is the ability to zoom into any of the individual photos in the panorama, as well as the rendering ability to show it in a different resolution, including a hi-res version. It's a great feature to have, since it allows for you to have more creative control over your choices, compared to the older stitch mode, which could only be done with camera settings. One of the most user-friendly ways of featuring a panorama is through the catalog. After selecting the file(s), you'll have the option to "Add to page", under the Page menu. This will open a new viewing page for the panorama. In addition, if you're using an online gallery, you can use the "Create space" option.
